Plan for the Future with a Decade of Data

When you have passion about an important topic, you tend to stick with it. That's why Genworth has been providing insights on the importance of planning for long term care since 2004 with its annual Cost of Care Survey.

For the 10th consecutive year, Genworth has examined the cost of long term care across the U.S. to help Americans plan for these expenses. The most comprehensive study of its kind, Genworth's 2013 Cost of Care Survey (conducted by CareScout®) covers nearly 15,000 long term care providers across all 50 states and the District of Columbia, in 437 regions nationwide. This unique level of detail can help consumers plan for long term care costs in their preferred location and care setting.

With long term care costs on the rise, planning and preparation are more important than ever. A long term care situation can be triggered by many different events. One of families' – indeed, the nation's – biggest concerns is the impact of Alzheimer's disease, including the financial costs. Once again this year, the Cost of Care Survey report features a special section on the long term care costs related to this challenging disease.

Genworth is proud to be in our 38th year as a leading provider of long term care insurance.* We are also proud of our reputation for educating and empowering American families, financial professionals, policymakers and others about the need to plan for long term care.

Emerging Trends and Findings

For 10 consecutive years, Genworth has surveyed long term care service providers across the country. Genworth's survey includes 437 regions that cover all Metropolitan Statistical Areas defined for the 2010 U.S. census.

Looking back at the past five years of survey results, Genworth recognizes emerging trends across the long term care services landscape. Overall, the cost of care among facility-based providers has steadily increased. For example, in 2008 the median annual rate for a private nursing home room was $67,525, compared with the 2013 median annual rate of $83,950. This means that Americans can expect to pay approximately $16,425 more per year today for a nursing home than they had to pay in 2008. This increase represents a 4.45 percent compound annual growth rate over that period.

In contrast to facility-based care, rates charged by home care providers for "non-skilled" services have remained relatively flat over the past five years. For example, whereas the national hourly private pay median rate charged by a licensed home health agency for a home health aide was $18.50 in 2008, the 2013 hourly rate has only slowly crept up to $19. The historical compound annual growth rate for this type of care service has been only 1 percent over a five-year period. Home care rates have remained flat in part because of increased competition among agencies and the availability of unskilled labor, and because the companies that provide these types of services do not incur the costs associated with maintaining stand-alone health care facilities.

Beyond Dollars: The True Impact of Long Term Caring

This report articulates the findings of a research study on the circle of care and the impact on the many people within it. The most surprising realization was the impact on even "secondary" caregivers (those who are not necessarily providing hands-on care or at the forefront of care, but are fully understanding of all the dynamics of the situation) and their families. For example, more than half (57 percent) of primary caregivers surveyed reported dipping into their own retirement funds and/or savings, and 42 percent of secondary caregivers reported doing so, as well. And both groups of respondents reported significantly reducing their contributions to savings accounts, 401(k)s and their kids' college education savings, illustrating the impact of an unfunded care event on families' financial futures.

More than 800 consumers with personal involvement in a long term care event lasting more than 30 days were surveyed. The report, which can be found at genworth.com/costofcare, includes quantitative data from the study, along with compelling stories, thoughts and perspectives of the individuals who participated in the survey, provided in their own words.

Long Term Care Overview

Research shows that at least 70 percent of people over the age of 65 will need long term care services at some point in their lifetime.[2] Long term care is the type of care you may need if you have a prolonged physical illness, disability or severe cognitive impairment (such as Alzheimer's disease) that keeps you from living independently. These limitations may prevent you from carrying out basic self-care tasks, such as bathing, dressing or eating, called Activities of Daily Living (ADLs).

Today, consumers have more choices than ever before when planning for potential long term care needs. Here is an overview of available long term care options:

Homemaker Services

This service makes it possible for people to live in their own homes, or to return to their homes, by helping complete household tasks that they can't manage alone. Homemaker services aides may clean houses, cook meals or run errands.

Home Health Aides

Personal and home health aides help those who are elderly, disabled or ill live in their own homes instead of residential care facilities or nursing homes. Home health aides may offer services to people who need more extensive personal care than family or friends are able, or have the time or resources, to provide.

Adult Day Health Care (ADH)

Adult Day Health Care centers can offer a much-needed break to caregivers. This type of care provides service at community-based centers for adults who need assistance or supervision during the day but who do not need around-the-clock care. There are a variety of "models" of Adult Day Health Care programs. All models are intended to offer socialization, supervision and structured activities designed for the individual needs of the participants at the center. Some programs also may provide personal care, transportation, medication management, health-related services, intergenerational programming, social services, meals, personal assistance and therapeutic activities.

Most consumers prefer to receive long term care in their homes. In fact, more than two-thirds of Genworth's initial benefit claims are for home health care.[3]

Assisted Living Facilities (ALF)

Assisted living facilities (referred to as Residential Care Facilities in California) are living arrangements that provide personal care and health services for people who may need assistance with ADLs, but who wish to live as independently as possible and do not need the level of care provided by a nursing home. It's important to note that assisted living is not an alternative to a nursing home, but an intermediate level of long term care.

Nursing Home Care

Nursing homes are for those people who may need a higher level of supervision and care than what is provided in an assisted living facility. They offer residents personal care assistance, room and board, supervision, medication, therapies and rehabilitation, as well as skilled nursing care 24 hours a day.

Long Term Care Financing Options

Another factor to consider in planning for long term care is, of course, how to pay for it. With median costs ranging from $41,756 to $83,950 per year depending on the type of care needed, finding a way to pay for long term care can be a challenge for many people. As an example, assuming the average stay in a nursing home is three years, costs can easily surpass $250,000 for the entire long term care event.

People generally think there are four basic ways to pay for long term care: Medicare, Medicaid, out of pocket, or private long term care insurance. Those who are thinking of relying on Medicare or Medicaid to provide long term care services need to be well informed about both the advantages and limitations of these programs.

Medicare

Generally, Medicare is the federal program that provides hospital and medical insurance to people age 65 or older and to certain ill or disabled persons. Benefits may be available for home health care, but only if certain conditions are met.

Medicare may pay for up to 100 days of care in a skilled nursing facility per benefit period – 100 percent for the first 20 days (after a three-day hospital stay, provided skilled care is needed). Then, for days 21-100, Medicare requires a co-payment. To help cover the co-payment, many seniors also have a Medicare supplement insurance policy. In general, once Medicare stops paying for care, the supplement payment also will end.

Medicaid

Medicaid (referred to as Medi-Cal in California) generally pays for certain health services and nursing home care for those with low incomes and limited resources. Medicaid may also pay for some long term care services at home and in the community. Medicaid has limitations on the amount of assets you may own and the amount of income you may receive each month before you are eligible for benefits. Who is eligible and what services are covered vary from state to state. There also are restrictions on transferring assets to others in order to qualify for Medicaid.

Self-Insure (or Out-of-Pocket Payment)

As you page through this report, you can look up the costs of various types of care in your state – private and semi-private nursing home, assisted living facility, home health aides and homemaker services. These costs can give you a good idea of how much money you or your family would need if you or a loved one requires long term care.

Long Term Care Insurance

Long term care insurance helps pay for your care and protect your assets by paying for covered expenses up to the amounts set forth in your policy. Depending upon the type of policy you choose, this insurance can pay for a wide variety of home, community-based and facility care services, and can offer you care options that may not be covered through government programs.

Many states participate in the Long Term Care Insurance Partnership Program ("Partnership Program"). The Partnership Program is designed to encourage individuals to plan for their long term care needs by allowing them to retain more assets than would otherwise be allowed under state Medicaid eligibility requirements. As a result, policyholders are able to retain assets they would otherwise have to spend down prior to qualifying for Medicaid benefits. Generally, individuals can participate in their state's Partnership Program by owning a long term care insurance policy that meets the requirements for the Partnership Program. Policies qualifying under the Partnership Program generally do not cost more than non-qualified policies with similar benefits.

Alzheimer's Disease and Long Term Care

In a study conducted by Age Wave on behalf of Genworth, 61 percent of respondents ranked having Alzheimer's disease as their single greatest fear among disabling diseases in later life.[4] The Alzheimer's Association estimates that approximately 5.2 million Americans of all ages have Alzheimer's disease. This includes an estimated 5 million people age 65 and older and approximately 200,000 individuals under age 65 who have younger-onset Alzheimer's. In fact, one in nine people age 65 and older and about one-third of people age 85 and older have Alzheimer's disease.[5]

Currently, there is no cure for Alzheimer's disease. In fact, Alzheimer's now ranks as the fifth-leading cause of death for those ages 65 and older, and the sixth-leading cause of death across all ages in the U.S.[6]

Because the duration of the disease generally can range from four to eight years after a diagnosis to as long as 20 years,[7] the need for long term care support is critical. Indeed, 46 percent of Genworth's total claims in payment, and 50 percent of all claims dollars, are due to dementia, including Alzheimer's.[8]

In addition to the significant cost of paid care, unpaid caregivers – primarily family members – provided 17.5 billion hours of unpaid care valued at more than $216.5 billion in 2012 alone. The Alzheimer's Association also reports that the cost of care related to Alzheimer's, including health care, long term care and hospice, will soar to a projected $1.2 trillion per year by 2050.[9] This astronomical figure might further deplete the hard-won-back financial reserves of families along with the nation's Medicare funds and our states' Medicaid funds.

The cost of Alzheimer's disease takes many forms. Another Genworth study, Beyond Dollars: The True Cost of Long Term Caring, illustrates the less obvious but still significant cost to caregivers and their families in terms of short-term impact on jobs, longer-term effects on careers, material reductions in savings for the future – particularly retirement and college savings – and the broad and heartbreaking impact on family relationships.[10]

Methodology

CareScout®

CareScout has conducted the Genworth Cost of Care Survey annually since 2004. Located in Waltham, Massachusetts, CareScout has specialized in helping families find long term care providers nationwide since 1997.

This year, CareScout – a Genworth company – contacted more than 43,000 providers to complete nearly 15,000 surveys of nursing homes, assisted living facilities, adult day health facilities and home care providers. Potential respondents were selected randomly from the CareScout nationwide database of providers in each category of long term care services. Survey respondents representing all 50 states, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico were contacted by phone during January and February of 2013. Survey respondents were informed that survey data provided would be included in the Genworth 2013 Cost of Care Survey results. Survey questions varied, based on the type of care provider.

Considered the most comprehensive survey of its kind, the Genworth Cost of Care Survey is the first to publish costs for all 437 U.S. Metropolitan Statistical Areas (MSAs). MSA definitions are established by the U.S. Office of Management and Budget and include approximately 84 percent of the U.S. population. The survey also includes some counties outside of the MSA regions. To create accurate historical trends for this expanded scope, CareScout recast the base data from the 2008 survey into the current region structure. As a result, CareScout is able to report a five-year compound annual growth rate for each region.

Home Care (HC)

Surveyors completed nearly 3,500 interviews with licensed home health care providers representing approximately 19 percent of home care agencies. The agencies surveyed provided home health care and homemaker services where a skilled nurse does not need to be present. A home health aide will typically help with bathing, dressing, transferring and toileting, but not with catheters or injections. Most of these agencies also provide homemaker services that typically include assistance with shopping, finances, cooking, errands and transportation. Homemaker services may also be employed for the purpose of providing companionship.

Annual rates are based on 44 hours of care per week, multiplied by 52 weeks. Where a rate range was provided, the midpoint was used. The survey excludes holiday rates.

Adult Day Health Care (ADH)

Across 437 regions, surveyors polled more than 40 percent of adult day health care facilities, resulting in more than 1,150 completed surveys.

ADH is designed to meet the needs of adults who are functionally and/or severely cognitively impaired. Programs are intended to be structured and comprehensive, and to take place in a protective setting that promotes well-being through a variety of health, social and other support services. These services are intended to help enable individuals live more independently in the community. These services may also be used to provide relief for family caregivers.

ADH facility rates are structured in a variety of ways: some charge by the hour, some by the half-day and others for the full day, regardless of utilization. All rates used in Genworth's survey were extrapolated to a daily (6-8 hours) rate.

ADH facility rates may be subsidized by the government or the community. A government subsidy is based on the individual's ability to pay. However, a community subsidy is available to individuals regardless of their income level. This survey captures the full private pay rates or, where applicable, the community subsidy rates. This survey does not capture the government subsidy rates.

Annual rates are based on the daily rate multiplied by five days per week, and then multiplied by 52 weeks.

Assisted Living Facilities (ALF)

Across 437 regions, surveyors polled more than 15 percent of licensed assisted living facilities, resulting in more than 6,200 completed surveys.

Unlike nursing homes, there is no uniform regulatory standard for assisted living facilities. As a consequence, states have instituted licensing standards that vary from state to state. The assisted living facilities polled were licensed according to the licensure requirements of the state in which the assisted living facility was located.

Currently, there are more than 70 different names or designations for facilities licensed as some form of an assisted care facility. Generally, only about 50 percent of these care facilities use the term "assisted living facility" as a part of their formal name or licensure designation. For example, some facilities may be identified as "residential care facilities." Because of variations in licensing requirements by state, both small group homes and large multi-service facilities qualified as assisted living facilities for the purposes of this study.

Surveyors collected the monthly private pay rates as they ranged from basic care to more substantial care for a one-bedroom unit in an assisted living facility. Where a rate range was provided, the average of the high and low was used in the annual cost calculation. Surveyors also determined whether the facility charges a non-refundable community or entrance fee. This study shows that approximately 42 percent of assisted living facilities charge a one-time, non-refundable fee.

Annual rates are based on the monthly fee multiplied by 12 months.

Nursing Homes (NH)

Across all regions of the study, surveyors polled more than 25 percent of certified and licensed nursing homes, resulting in more than 3,800 completed surveys.

Surveyors collected the daily rates for private rooms (single occupancy) and semi-private rooms (double occupancy) in Medicare-certified nursing facilities. Medicare-certified nursing homes represent more than 90 percent of all nursing homes in the U.S. The daily room charge usually includes services beyond rent, such as three meals a day, laundry, sundries, basic nurse supervision and generic non-prescription pharmaceuticals.

Annual rates are based on the daily fee multiplied by 365.
